OF INTEREST TO WOMEN. LITTLE PROBLEMS OF LOVE AND MARRIAGE

Does Business Make a Girl Cynical Toward Marriage?

Among the reasons wrought forward for the notable decrease in marriage is woman's entrance in the business world. Since she has become a wage-earner she is not marrying so generally, and some contend that the closer study of man and the better knowledge of him that business life brings has made her cynical in regard to marriage. She has no longer any illusions about man, and seeing him for just what he is, she hesitates about linking her future with his, especially as she can have a good time and income of her own, earned by herself, and with no restrictions upon the spending of it.

Is this one of the reasons for the decrease in marriage?

It is doubtful. Business does not make women as a rule view marriage cynically; it only makes them regard it more practically. They have ceased to view it or men in the romantic, sentimental fashion of the girl of fifty years ago.

It is true that business life does make a woman know men better. They see the real man, not the parlor man. They see his ill-temper, his untidiness, his shifting of work on others, the many human faults of the ordinary man and which many a girl does not find out her paragon has until after marriage. But is there any harm in knowing the faults she must put up with? Isn't it better to know them beforehand and decide to endure them cheerfully or not to marry if they are not endurable? Surely this is the saner course for a reasonable being to adopt than to marry in ignorance, be disillusioned, and endure as best she may.

The business woman, too, knows the practical side of life. She has experienced its hard realities. She knows the mere fact of getting married will not turn it immediately into an Eden and strew her path with roses. There will be work to do just the same, only of another kind, bills to pay, and many another practical fact of life to meet. She can face the future with knowledge, not ignorance, and decide whether she cares enough for it to accept it. It isn't a case of taking it blindly, believing in unalloyed happiness. Having seen life in its working clothes, as it were, she knows what this side of marriage means.

All this need not necessarily make her cynical. It simply makes her wise. There is a bright and beautiful face to married life which she is quite capable of appreciating. But she knows it has its reverse side also; that troubles, little and big, will come; that man is not a faultless creature and she is better ready to cope with what is ahead of her than the girl who marries in ignorance. And if she is of the kind to whom the trials peculiar to married life seem unbearable, if she believes she will be happier single, then she wisely and deliberately decides to remain unmarried.

BARRARA BOYD.

FROM WOMAN'S POINT OF VIEW

A boy of eighteen persuaded his uncle, who was guardian of a fortune of $50,000, left by a grandfather, to place the money in a bank subject to his draft, and proceeded to spend it at the rate of $1,000 a day. After his fortune was spent, he drifted back to his native city, where his relatives refused to have anything to do with him. Unused to work, and driven to extremity, he did the natural thing under such circumstances—tried dishonesty and fell into the clutches of the law. He is barely nineteen, and what a future? The real culprit in this case is the uncle who placed such glittering temptation in his way. It is rank injustice to cripple a boy by depriving him of the training which would make him a useful member of society. At twenty-one this boy, with proper training, would have been ready to buy a partnership in some good business or the whole business, for that matter, for spending money is not the pastime of all rich men.

When it is considered best for the richest boy in the world to be educated to thrift and care, no parent or guardian can afford to do less for other boys. Little John Nicholas Brown, with all his millions, is deprived of a watch, because he has been careless with the two or three which he was permitted to own. I know scores of boys whose fathers work hard for their dollars, yet who are destructive to a degree. Worse than that is the indulgence which passes over such a fault, sometimes with the excuse that the child is of an inventive turn of mind, and wants to know how things are made.

Inventors, as a rule, are not a prosperous lot. Only the occasional one strikes a practical idea that appeals to the public, so there is little sense in fostering a characteristic that does not even offer a fair chance of being valuable. Ordinary care is something to be encouraged, for it has a place in every department of life. There are not enough painstaking men and women in the world, not nearly enough to do the work of actual life in a fairly creditable fashion. We are so quick to spare children the hard things of life that we lose sight of their future, of the time when they must fight their own battles, success of which depends upon the matter of equipment.

From my window to-day I saw three schoolboys cut across private grounds on their way home. That, in itself, was an offense, because signs against trespassing were posted in plain view. But each boy knew that the house was unoccupied, and each left his mark by shattering a pane of glass in the back window. It is needless to say that the did not linger after that piece of mischief. Those boys belong to respectable families, and should have known better. Whether they did or not is matter of guesswork on my part but detection would have meant trouble, and that they all know.

BETTY BRADEN.

Pet Dog's Miniature Bed.
From The-Bits.

The pet dog show at the Royal Horticultural Hall drew a great crowd, chiefly of women, and the old familiar scenes of luxury were witnessed in every avenue of the nearly 1,000 pens. But all records in this direction were surpassed by the miniature iron bedstead, with mattress, sheets, blanket, quilt, hangings, and all complete, and in which a four-month-old Pekinese spaniel reposed. The smallest dog in the show was Mamma. Willson, a miniature black and tan terrier. It weighed only two pounds two ounces, and was brought to the exhibition in a man's coat pocket. The lightest dog, however, was a Yorkshire terrier of one pound fourteen ounces, with a delightfully groomed coat of silken fleece.

Cheese Coquettes.
From The Philadelphia Press.

These may be prepared, and even fried the day before, and then carefully heated in the oven when required. Quarter of a pound of grated cheese, two heaping tablespoonsful of fine bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of butter, one egg and two extra yolks, salt and red pepper, bread crumbs for coating, fat for frying. Mix together the two tablespoonsful of crumbs, cheese melted butter, and seasonings.

Then add enough beaten yolk of egg to bind them all in a soft paste, but it must be sufficiently stiff to shape easily. Make the mixture into small balls, crush these over with beaten egg, then coat them with crumbs. Repeat this egg and crumbing, so that they have two coatings. Have ready a pan of frying fat. When a bluish smoke rises from it put in the balls, two or three at a time, and fry them a nice golden color. Drain them well on white paper, and serve them piled up on a lace paper, on a hot dish.

GIRLS' AND CHILD'S ROMPERS.

Paris Pattern No. 3271
All Seams Allowed.

When the real play season sets in and digging in the sand, rolling on the grass, climbing trees and fences demands some ample protection or substitute for dainty clothes, then mothers are glad to avail themselves of the newest style rompers such as are here pictured, which are of most simple construction and give assurance of comfort to the small wearer. The bloomers being circular in cut, while the sleeves may be long or short, as preferred; also, there is a convenient breast pocket to insure the whereabouts of the handkerchief. The pictured rompers are made of scarlet Turkey cotton, but denim, gingham, seersucker, chambray, duck or crash may also be used. The pattern is in 14 sizes—3 to 8 years. For a girl of 5 years the rompers require 2 1/2 yards of material 36 inches wide.

A Free Hair Tonic.
From The Philadelphia Press.

It is acknowledged by all beauty culturists that there is no tonic for the hair like plenty of sunlight and air. Nor do they hesitate to give this prescription to their patients, though no cost is attached.

The woman who makes it her practice to let her hair down daily and let the sun shine on it and the air blow through it for at least fifteen minutes, preferably longer, will soon cease to complain of falling locks.

Like all tonics, this sunning treatment can be overdone. Because sun is good for the hair it does not mean that sun-burning is equally good.

As summer approaches this fault of over-sunning should be guarded against. Many a woman comes home from the seashore with her hair bleached, streaked and lifeless looking from going all day in the hot sun with uncovered head.

A Soothing Drink.
Where one has a bad throat a soothing drink can be made by bringing a pint of barley water to a boil, then add one ounce of the best gum arabic and stir until dissolved.

Strain and sweeten or not as desired. Take but a little at a time. It will stop a rasping cough.

"THE BELLE OF NEW YORK."

Paint and Powder Club in Famous Musical Comedy This Afternoon.

"The Belle of New York" will probably prove the most attractive of the numerous offerings of the famous Paint and Powder Club, of Baltimore. The matinee will be at the New National Theater at 2 o'clock, and, as is the custom for the club's performances, a big society turnout is expected. To see the youngsters cavorting about in their costumes, male and female, is a sight to go miles to see.

WITH PAINT AND POWDER CLUB

J. HYLAND KUHN,
in "The Belle of New York."

The boys made a big hit in Baltimore, and have been much encouraged by being termed genuine actors.

As every one well knows, "The Belle" is not merely a farce. There is wit and intelligent humor, a vein of pathos, and a delicious score, the numbers of which have outlived hundreds of more recent musical comedy efforts. In fact, "The Belle" has been termed the one classic of American musical comedy.

Good Bill at Casino.

The week opening Monday, April 4, at the Casino, will present a bill of variety of the kind that produces the smiles that stay, and is sure to hold up the reputation of the "home of continuous," of giving the best show at popular prices ever attempted in the city of Washington. A big feature act is coming at the head of the bill, and will be announced later.

Goldie Rhinehart & Co. will present a real smart sketch that is down to the minute. The three D'Estelle Sisters will offer a winning singing and dancing turn. Charles C. Bunnell and Frances Brooks will appear in a good comedy sketch. Frederick Roberts will present his latest monologue, with songs. Lillian Burt is a popular comedienne, and there will be other good vaudeville numbers to round out the usual entertaining Casino week.

MORNING CHIT-CHAT.

"GOOD housekeepers are not good homemakers," said a prominent club woman in a lecture recently.

"The housekeeper's eternal war against dirt," she went on, "makes her a slave and makes martyrs of her family. She has an idea that when she dies St. Peter will ask her how many pairs of socks she has mended or how many buttons she has sewed on. She does not know that it is better to be cheerful and sympathetic, the comforting homemaker, than to have kept the house in such immaculate order."

I think that is a very good reminder for this time of year.

For this is the time when the "eternal war against dirt" is apt to be waged most hotly and the martyrdom of the rest of the family to be correspondingly severe.

Now a perfectly immaculate house is a beautiful and desirable thing to be sure. Do not think I am denying that.

But when any other, beautiful and desirable thing, a gowd, a trip, a piece of jewelry—costs too much, you would think yourself weak if you did not have the strength of mind to turn your back on it, wouldn't you?

Then, when a perfectly immaculate house costs so much mental and physical strength that you cannot be yourself for weeks, is it any less a weakness not to be able to deny yourself that luxury?

In a story in a recent issue of a well-known magazine a man and a woman are having a discussion about another woman who "works herself to a frazzle trying to make things nice for her husband" while her husband "doesn't seem to appreciate it a bit."

One of the marks of his lack of appreciation is that he seldom spends his evenings with her.

The man who is discussing the matter suggests that perhaps this immaculate housewife is too tired to make a very restful companion for a man who has worked hard all day.

"But she gets tired slaving for him," flashes back the woman who is discussing the matter.

The busy man let his paper drop and put the tips of his fingers together as he always did when tackling a legal problem at the office.

"Oh, that's just it," he said speculatively, "does she?"

For a moment the sheer audacity of it silenced the wife, but the "Of course she does" was emphatic when it came.

"Perhaps he'd rather have other outward and visible signs of her inward and spiritual grace. It may be, you know, that he isn't really keen about perfect housekeeping."

"Any decent man likes cleanliness and order."

"In moderation, my dear, in moderation. There's a type of woman with whom perfect housekeeping is not a self-sacrifice, but self-indulgence. The rest of the family are the sacrifice."

I think that's a marvelously good analysis of the case. I take off my hat to the "busy man."

If a poll of all the men in the land could be taken on the question, "Which would you rather have, a perfectly immaculate house with a tired-out, nervous wife within it, or a normal, well-balanced, restful wife in a comparatively clean house?" I have an idea the result would be a unanimous vote on one side.

But I'll leave you to guess which.

So when you sally forth with mop and pail and dust pan and broom and all the other impedimenta of war this spring, suppose you take along with you mentally the motto that helped to make the Athenians the great people they were:

"Nothing in excess."

And suppose you apply it to cleanliness.
